

Call for applications
Science is Wonderful! 2020 – 22-24 September
Online event

[TEMPLATE EMAIL FOR RESEARCHERS AND PROJECT COORDINATORS]

Subject: Applications to the Science is Wonderful! exhibition (22-24 September) / Where research and innovation meet with citizens

Dear researcher/Dear project coordinator/Dear Madam/Dear Sir/Dear xxx,

Science is Wonderful! brings the world of science, research and innovation to the public. This year, the exhibition will take place fully online from 22 to 24 September to reach out to more European citizens than ever as part of the second edition of the European Research and Innovation Days.

Through an array of digital activities, researchers will interact with children, students and citizens, explain what researchers' role is in a post-crisis context and highlight how research has an impact on citizens' daily lives. The event will also address hundreds of stakeholders from all over Europe in the framework of the European Research and Innovation Days: you will be able to interact with them and draw their attention on your research.

This is a unique opportunity to put your outreach and communication skills into action, be impactful and show how you are contributing to develop solutions addressing the current crisis, its consequences and the priorities that will be at the core of the recovery.

We are looking for EU-funded projects working in all disciplines and speaking all languages to participate online in the exhibition. If you are convinced that you are up to this exciting e-encounter with many fledgling future scientists, citizens and stakeholders, please fill in the online form by 5 July 2020:

If your application is successful, the European Commission and its contractors will contact you to prepare your activities.

Should you have any question concerning your application, please contact us at this email address: Raffaele.Ferrando@ec.europa.eu

Good luck!

The EU R&I Days communication team